InformationContinuous Synopsis Record (CSR)

All passenger ships engaged in international traffic and all other ships with a gross tonnage of at least 500 engaged in international traffic (with the exception of pleasure crafts, fishing vessels, barges and warships) shall have a Continuous Synopsis Record (CSR).

The CSR consists of a running series of records giving a historical account of a ship. The main purpose of introducing the CSR was to improve the possibility to check the ownership of a certain ship. The first CSR of the ship shall carry the number 1. All the ship's subsequent CSRs shall carry consecutive numbers. There must be no discontinuance in the numerical sequence.

① Owner data

When the ship has several owners, it is sufficient to give the data of one of them. The data will be controlled against the Swedish Transport Agency's Register of Ships.

② IMO Registered owner number

Every person and company owning a ship with a gross tonnage of more than 100 engaged in international shipping shall have a unique identification number.

Ship owners are assigned these numbers by Lloyd's Register Fairplay Ltd. At Lloyd's website (<http://imonumbers.lrfairplay.com/>), it is possible to search for a company's identification number. If the company does not have an identification number the word "missing" is to be entered in the field "Shipping company's identification no.". If there is no identification number for the company, the Swedish Transport Agency will apply for such a number.

The requirement for shipping company's identification number is valid after 1 January 2009. However, this does not mean that all CSRs will be replaced by CSRs with shipping company's identification number after 1 January 2009. In accordance with SOLAS Amendments, Regulation 5, a new CSR shall be issued only as a result of changes. In case of changes requiring a new CSR, shipping company's identification number for each of the companies/shipping companies will be included in the new CSR.

③ ISM operator

The ISM operator is the person/company that has assumed the shipowner's responsibility for the operation of the ship, thereby agreeing to assume the obligations and responsibilities provided by the ISM code.
